Bobo Bufa was a little girl who was afraid to speak up. She was shy and timid, and she didn't like to draw attention to herself. But when her family was threatened, Bobo found her voice and stood up for what she believed in.

Bobo Bufa lived in a small village with her parents and her six siblings. Her family was very poor, and they often had to go hungry. One day, a rich man came to the village and offered to buy Bobo Bufa's family's land. Bobo Bufa's parents were hesitant to sell their land, but they were desperate for money. They agreed to sell the land, and the rich man gave them a small amount of money.

Bobo Bufa was heartbroken. She loved her home, and she didn't want to leave. She begged her parents to let her stay, but they said that they couldn't afford to keep her. Bobo Bufa was forced to leave her home and move to the city with her family.
